Question (5 pts):

Consider two lowest energy levels of the non-relativistic hydrogen atom (i.e. n=1 and n=2). How will these energy levels change if we take into account the weakly relativistic nature of the hydrogen atom?

Hint: use addition of angular momenta and the relativistic expression for the energy levels $E_{n,j}$ derived from the Dirac equation.